Nation Mourns Passing of President Ronald Reagan

President George Bush has proclaimed June 11, 2004 a National Day of Mourning to honor the memory of the former President Ronald Reagan.

According to Bush, Reagan possessed "an unshakable faith in the values of our country and the character of our people" and "renewed America's confidence and restored our nation."

Reagan's "optimism, strength and humility," Bush pointed out, "epitomized the American spirit."

His "courage and determination," the president said, had "enhanced America's security and advanced the spread of peace, liberty and democracy to millions of people who had lived in darkness and oppression."

Bush asked the American people "to pay homage to the memory of President Reagan" on June 11, adding that he invites "the people of the world who share our grief to join us in this solemn observance."

Reagan's leadership as chief executive "has left us stronger and better," Bush declared, noting the former president "has left us for a better place, the shining city that awaits him."

"... peace is the highest aspiration of the American people. We will negotiate for it, sacrifice for it; we will not surrender for it—now or ever." - President Ronald Reagan, First Inaugural Address, 1981

SUBWAY's Jared Fogle Visits GTMO

National spokesman for SUBWAY, Jared Fogle, dropped in for a visit with the residents of GTMO this week.

According to Fogle, the trip took almost a year of planning and it was well worth the effort. During an interview on "Open Line," he thanked all the troops in GTMO for the outstanding work they do to help keep America safe.

Fogle showed off his amazing pants as he spoke to people about health and fitness and related his own story of self-improvement.

For the past few years, Fogle has helped promote the "Subway Diet" that helped him lose approximately 240 pounds.

Fogle wasn't the only one sharing fitness and health stories. In honor of the visit, SUBWAY sponsored an essay contest, searching for a person with the most inspiring health improvement story.

Rebecca Jeffries shared her own personal fitness story and for her efforts she will receive one free meal per week (includes a Fresh Value Meal with the choice of a six-inch, footlong, wrap or a personal pizza) during her stay in GTMO up to one year.

Base Celebrates Cuzco Wells Anniversary

By JO3 Jeremy Zeitlin

Naval Media Center, Guantanamo Bay

The battle lasted only four days, but it would forge an everlasting bond between the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps in GTMO, and set an indelible mark in the pages of history. The battle would eventually pave the way for freedom of the Caribbean, the construction of the Panama Canal, and etch the names of those fallen heroes upon richly-deserved monuments.

The valor and service to our country the men of the Navy and Marine Corps demonstrated in June 1898 during the Battle of Cuzco Wells happened right in our own backyard.

June 14 is the anniversary of this historic battle - the day the Marines landed on the shores of Guantanamo Bay to defeat the Spanish forces.

GTMO residents have the opportunity to explore the battleground first hand on Saturday, June 12 and Sunday, June 13. The annual Battle of Cuzco Wells Tour is headed by Capt. William Elliott, Executive Officer Marine Corps Security Forces Company, Guantanamo Bay.

"The tour begins with a brief history of the actual landing, and the events leading up to the battle," said Elliott. "We'll start at McCalla Hill, and follow the same route the Marines took June 14, 1898. During the course of the tour, I'll explain how the Navy supported the Marines from the sea, while they closed in and ultimately defeated the Spanish.

The battle provided several historical precedents. "Most importantly," said Elliott, "the Battle of Cuzco Wells formed the perfect model for the Navy-Marine team regarding command decision making. It also solidified the Marine Corps' effectiveness in securing advanced Naval bases for years to come."

Meet GTMO's Base Business Manager

The Installation Business Manager (IBM) at Guantanamo Bay, Karen Artz, is the senior civilian advisor to the Commanding Officer, providing senior managers with training, information and recommendations for making decisions on administrative command operations and management. This is accomplished through analyzing the effectiveness and efficiency of command programs and operations.

Some of her responsibilities include providing business expertise for making resource decisions. Artz is charged with ensuring the overall fiscal health of the installation. She works with regional program directors and installation functional managers to ensure adequate funding and staffing is available to execute the station's mission. This involves long range planning in validating and generating requirements for current and future missions and aligning these requirements with the vision and guiding principles of the installation strategic plan.

Soon after Commander Navy Installations (CNI), was established in fiscal year 03, the Commander CNI embarked on an initiative to merge best business practices into the Navy shore infrastructure. In an effort to support CNI's new focus on business practices and processes, Commander Navy Region Southeast (CNRSE) identified resources (both labor funding and billets) in order to provide each installation within the CNRSE region the capability to hire a full time Business Manager. The Business Manager position at Guantanamo Bay was established in fiscal year 2003 and GTMO hired Artz as its first Business Manager in June of 2003.

Artz brings over 10 years of experience in shore installation management to her duties as IBM here. As the position was not only new to GTMO, but was also a new function performed throughout the CNRSE area of responsibility, there were definitely some learning curves to conquer. Initially there was no clear guidance from either CNI or CNRSE regarding what the exact responsibilities of the IBMs would be.

"It's been an evolutionary process here at GTMO determining the duties and responsibilities to address the needs of installation senior leadership as well as respond to the multitude of resource related data calls required by GTMO's immediate superior in command, CNRSE," said Artz.

Now that she is approaching her first year on the job, her role and responsibilities are better defined. Artz explains that as part of the installation's leadership team, comprised of the Commanding Officer, Executive Officer and Command Master Chief, great strides are being taken in achieving efficiencies in shore installation management here at GTMO in its mission as a naval presence supporting U.S. interests in the Caribbean.

"It's my goal to make GTMO an even better place than it already is and live up to our vision statement of a "great place, great people, doing what no one else can do," said Artz.

CNRSE Prepares for Budget, Workforce Reshaping

From CNRSE

Since October 2003, Commander, Navy Region Southeast (CNRSE), has been working with Commander, Naval Installations (CNI), to identify ways of providing consistent and effective shore installation services and support with the end goal of improving current and future readiness, as well as mission execution.

Because of current military requirements and the war on global terrorism, CNI and the regions worldwide are realigning resources and adjusting support services to deliver more efficient combat ready forces.

"At CNRSE, and throughout the region, our focus and goal have been creating efficiencies and savings that could then be redirected to provide for fleet use in combat operations and support for them," said CNRSE Chief of Staff Capt. Larry Cotton.

To that end, CNRSE program directors and installation commanding officers have been working to assess programs and processes to determine if "we can do it better." The analysis includes all programs in the region from air operations, to MWR, to housing, public affairs, public safety, and everything in between.

"The Navy is changing the way it does business ashore," said Cotton. "As the CNO has said, readiness at any cost is no longer acceptable. We have a responsibility to taxpayers to continually assess our programs and strive to deliver the best readiness at the best cost," Cotton said.

For example, CNRSE evaluated what departments and individuals are assigned government vehicles and determined that 21 percent of that total number of vehicles, about 400, can be reduced. Other cost avoidance measures include reducing the amount of overtime pay in most programs, tighter restrictions on hiring new employees, and limiting training to that which is mission critical, such as that needed for certification, safety or health and welfare.

In addition, installations throughout CNRSE are reevaluating maintenance contracts and services. It is likely that equipment and vehicle maintenance and upgrades will be deferred, as well as funding for some local projects.

"Because of decreased third and fourth quarter budget allocations for fiscal year 2004, both region and installation leadership have adjusted existing levels of base operating support for our customers by reallocating dollars," said Cotton. "Fortunately, we were able to accomplish our 2004 fiscal goals and make our contributions to the Global War on Terrorism with minimal impact on workforce employment and the outstanding service we provide to the fleet.

"The support we have received from our workforce to accomplish our required goals has been tremendous," Cotton said. "We will continue to evaluate all options and impacts of requirements prior to implementing resource reduction strategies, and I ask that the entire CNRSE team remain positive and committed throughout the process."

Spring in Bloom: Ladies Garden Party 2004

For the second straight year, the ladies of GTMO joined together in comradery and fashion to celebrate life in Guantanamo Bay.

This year's theme was "Spring in Bloom." Over 100 women attended the event wearing a variety of hats and their Sunday best. Thanks to Terri McCoy, wife of Naval Station Commanding Officer, Capt. Les McCoy, the ladies enjoyed a pleasant afternoon of tea, refreshments and friendship. McCoy explained that the purpose behind the annual event is to provide a social gathering for women - similar to events that occurred on the base throughout the 1940's through 1960's when the ladies on base wore hats and attended teas.

"This year I wanted to include the Ophelia Group from the high school, as well," said McCoy. "These young ladies read poetry and participated in a fashion show called The History of Hats." The Ophelia Project helps develop the self-esteem of today's young women and was organized this year by W.T. Sampson school psychologist Margaret Elliott and English/Drama teacher Dawn MacFarland.

All the ladies in attendance created quite a fashion statement with their hats, too. A mandatory part of the event, hats ranged from simple to extraordinary. Prizes were awarded to those hats with a special flair. Pat Bell won for Most Creative, while Beverly Pavone's hat was voted Most Colorful. Julie Barnett's hat received many laughs as she walked away with the prize for Most Humorous. The Most Beautiful Hat prize went to Jennifer Overton, and the Most GTMO Hat prize went to Tina Lara.

Typical of last year, the ladies are already making plans for next year's tea and designing their hats. They all hope the event will be one future ladies of GTMO can enjoy for years to come.

W.T. Sampson Graduates Class of 2004

Valedictorian Farewell Address

The True Meanings Behind Words

By Grace Stephen

Welcome everyone to the graduation of W.T. Sampson's Class of 2004. But honestly, this is the last thing I want to do right now. Although I wanted to leave high school with a bang, nervously babbling in front of friends, family and even people I've never seen before wasn't what I had in mind - so bear with me.

In my farewell address to my fellow classmates, I don't want to use any drawn out or old clichés (although many of them do in fact have significant meanings behind them). During my years of high school, however, I've learned to examine the meanings of things and what people say.

"It's as if we've been filming our own Dawson's Creek - living in a small community with a high school where one person's drama is another's daily entertainment."

Grace Stephen, WTS HS 2004 Valedictorian

Like when your best friend swears, "I won't tell a soul," she's really saying, "Oh, this is juicy. I have to tell someone!" Or the phrase, "It's not the quantity, but quality that matters." What the teachers are hinting at is, "If you hand me a one paragraph essay, you're done!" Even Mrs. Haley probably thinks this speech isn't long enough. Finally, when our parents reassure us by saying, "Do your best. We'll still love you either way," this statement translates to, "This child better not embarrass me and act a fool!" Oh well guys, too late!

In all sincerity, I have no double meaning when I declare that I've enjoyed every second of my time here. No matter how many times (and they are in the billions) I've complained about being here, I truly appreciate every experience. Between "interesting" teachers and typical high school drama, I've loved it all.

It's as if we've been filming our own Dawson's Creek - living in a small community with a high school where one person's drama is another's daily entertainment. So many of us have come from various places and have now joined here to create W.T. Sampson's Graduating Class of 2004. I can stand here today and state that I am proud of all of us for having made it to this point.

To all my teachers, thanks for understanding me and teaching me, while still giving me room to be creative. To my family and close friends, I truly thank you guys for your patience to deal with a firecracker such as myself. And last, but not least, to all my fellow seniors; I will actually miss being sick of seeing you all day, every day.

I'm going to end this speech in the same way it began: without an ounce of advice or corny clichés. Let's face it, we're all way too stubborn and hard headed to even listen to it anyway.

With that in mind, congratulations, Class of 2004. We now look forward to our hard earned three months of sleep.

Hand & Foot Massage Now Available

Massage has been around for thousands of years, but it is being offered at GTMO for the first time. With the growing popularity of MWR's fitness program, the outside elements of our environment, and our need to wear sandals, our hands and feet take a real beating from everyday living. Now is the time to pamper your hands and feet.

Hand and foot massages are presented in 15-minute, 30-minute or 1-hour sessions. Each session includes the use of aromatherapy and massage stones. An optional hydrating treatment is offered. The hydrating treatment for the hands and arms includes an exfoliating rub, an alpha-hydroxy acid (AHA) activator and a finishing lotion that hydrates and restores elasticity to the skin. The hydrating treatment for the feet includes a marine mask, AHA sea scrub, sea salts and a therapeutic heel lotion that is an intense moisturizing complex that helps repair dry, cracked skin.

Persons with heart problems, high blood pressure or those who have suffered a stroke, must have their doctor's consent before a massage can be performed.

Don't forget Father's Day is around the corner. You can purchase a gift certificate at the base gym. For more information or to schedule an appointment, call Anna Ratcliff at 7580.

Program Links Troops with Civilian Careers

Helmets to Hardhats has entered its second year of helping servicemen and women land career-making slots in the construction industry. The congressionally-funded, one-of-a-kind program is administered by a non-profit trust, and connects National Guard, Reserve, and transitioning active duty members with meaningful work, good pay, and a sense of community in the building trades.

The H2H interactive web-based education and registration program has listed thousands of career opportunities in its first year with the Boilermakers, Ironworkers, Insulators, Roofers, and 11 other unions. More than 15,000 candidates have registered at www.helmetstohardhats.org; many have accepted, or are now in the process of qualifying for, careers as steelworkers, plumbers and pipefitters, cement masons, carpenters, electricians, sheet metal workers, and the host of trades.

Simultaneously, H2H has helped the construction industry gain ground in its efforts to recruit an additional 1.6 million workers over the next five years.

The latest companies to partner with Helmets to Hardhats are Bechtel, Disney, and the Tennessee Valley Authority. Hiring managers who use H2H to receive pre-screened candidates with strong track records whose training and experience have been carefully assessed. H2H also screens employers to make sure they meet program criteria.

Candidates need no previous construction experience to benefit from the program. Helmets to Hardhats offers one of the best job packages in the industry and, depending on the skill required for the trade, hundreds of hours of classroom training for apprentices and from 4,000 to 8,000 hours of on-the-job training with mentoring by experienced journeymen. A union apprentice receives a percentage of a journeyman's wage and full benefits: pension, medical, training, and more. A Helmets to Hardhats candidate receives all that, plus G.I. Bill funds, if eligible.

Year two goals include strengthening the brand name and expanding awareness of the program within the general military population and among armed services recruiters.

Over the next five years, H2H will press toward its objective of processing 200,000 Guard, Reserve, veterans, and transitioning active duty through the virtual portals by 2008.

Helmets to Hardhats is administered by the Center for Military Recruitment, Assessment, and Veterans Employment, which is directed by a board of trustees composed of an equal number of labor and employer trustees. The board's co-chairs are Edward C. Sullivan, President of the Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO, and Kenneth E. Hedman, Chairman of the North American Contractors Association. # Community Announcements

Local Student Selected to Attend Leadership Conference

Nicholas Basel, a student at W.T. Sampson High School, has been selected to attend Lead America's 2004 Congressional Student Leadership Conference (CSLC) at the Virginia Military Institute.

The CSLC is a college-accredited invitational leadership program for the most academically talented and promising young leaders. Exceptional high school students who have a record of academic achievement and extracurricular or community involvement, are invited to participate from across the United States and internationally. Through briefings and discussions with national and international leaders in the fields of study, and through realistic, hands-on simulations, students have the unique opportunity to experience leadership in action and to learn first-hand about the complexities of decision-making in a chosen field or profession. By engaging in special interactive workshops and activities, students learn and develop leadership skills, including effective communication, conflict resolution, team building and time management.

Nicholas' parents, Craig and Kathy Basel are very proud of his selection and look forward to seeing Nicholas complete this course during July.
